DAY 2

SESSION 1

THEME-OVERVIEW AND ARCHITECTURE OF THE INDIAN CONSTITUTIONAL ARRANGEMENT

SPEAKERS- Justice Adarsh Kumar Goel, Justice Navin Sinha, Prof. Vijay Kumar

First session of the day started with a warm welcoming of all the participants, i.e., judges of Bangladesh by Justice Raghuram. He briefly stated the history of National Judicial Academy, Bhopal and how we have been training and sharing experiences with judges from overseas because ultimately we are from the same family.

Talking about Bangladesh and India particularly, he noted that we may now be two different nations but once we were one and so we share common history in all the aspects including legal facet. For the same reason, societies across both the nations face same problems, issues and conflicts.

This session particularly aimed at ‘Overview and Architecture of the Indian Constitutional Arrangement’.

Justice Goel, sharing his memories of being in Bangladesh, noted that both India and Bangladesh have similar systems, same heritage and same set of problems. An overview of the Constitution of India was then given to the participants. It was pointed out that though the Indian Constitution was adopted in 1949 and that of Bangladesh in 1972, they both are broadly similar. The eminent drafters of the Constitution try to adopt and insert the best provisions from across the globe.

Quoting the drafter of the Indian Constitution Bhimrao Ambedkar “It is not the provisions of the Constitution, but the people who practice it.”

Noting the similarities between the Constitutions of both the countries such as Democratic System, Universal Adult Suffrage, Procedure of formation of the Government, Power of the Legislature, Pillars of the Governance (Legislature, Executive, and Judiciary). It was vehemently pointed out that the basis of judicial review is fundamental rights.

In the same light, various judgements of the Apex Court of United States were discussed.

In the case of Dred Scott v. Sandford, 1857, the black citizens of United States asked for equality since every American is equal. However, this plea was rejected by United States Supreme Court saying that classification on the basis of color is reasonable.

Further, in the case of Plessy v. Ferguson, 1896, the ‘Jim Crow Laws’ that expressly barred people to mix up were challenged. The United States Supreme Court, however, upheld the laws.

In the same regard, the initiative of Abraham Lincoln to get the practice of slavery abolished which ultimately led to his assassination. Further, the world-famous speech of Jr. Martin Luther King “I have a right to dream” was also discussed.

The next case was that of Brown v. Board of School Education, the judgment of Dred Scott was overruled and it was held that ‘equality means equality’ and thus in no case, there can be any kind of discrimination.

The Constitutional principles were then discussed in the Indian perspective. In the words of Mahatma Gandhi, object of the Constitution is to wipe off every tear from every eye. The judges need to apply the Constitutional vision in all the judgments that they deliver and should be concerned with the happiness of all.

Further, an instance of the legend Bhagat Singh was discussed when he was hanged at 23 for the charge of ‘conspiracy of murder of the police officer who ordered lathi charge on the Protestants. When asked the reason behind doing this in the last of trial, he answered ‘I want to create awareness against exploitation and bring a revolution’.

The views of Dr. Ambedkar were reiterated, i.e., Political democracy cannot last until it lies on the base of social democracy. According to him, liberty, fraternity and equality form the union of trinity.

Certain questions were then put to the participant judges such as what are the basic types of litigation that the judges deal with generally in Bangladesh; Are the Constitutional provisions relevant in subordinate judiciary, etc. This was then followed by some situation based question-answers regarding general types of cases that judges in both the countries encounter.

Later, as it is very clear that The Constitution of both the Countries is almost similar, the peculiar and key differences were pointed out between The Constitution of India and The Constitution of Bangladesh. With this, the session came to an end and it was concluded that the judiciary plays a crucial role in the justice system of any country by filling the gap.

SESSION 2

THEME- INDIAN JUDICIARY: ORGANIZATIONAL STRUCTURE AND JURISDICTION

SPEAKERS: Justice Navin Sinha; Prof. Vijay Kumar; Justice A.K. Goel

The session commenced with the ravishing words of Justice Raghuram, wherein he noted that The Constitution is the mother of all other laws. The eminent speakers stressed upon the importance and independence of the lower judiciary. The speakers made it a point to strongly convey to all the participants that they should never undermine themselves for being subordinate judges, after all it is their acumen upon which the appellate courts rely. The next focus of the session was on 'The problems faced by the judges in their respective courts back in their home-country '. The most common problems, as pointed out by the participant judges, were ruthless advocates, boycotting of the courts by advocates, harassing of litigants by the advocates, unreasonable extension of the cases.

It was then realized that there is a dire need to be innovative and creative so as to find out solutions to such problems.

This was followed by a formal participatory discussion on following facets:

- The areas in subordinate judiciary of Bangladesh wherein improvement is needed;
- Limitation on the powers of the President; and
- Judgment that goes beyond statutory law and are in fact the basis of certain laws in the Country.

The speakers then gave an overview of the organizational structure of the Indian Judiciary to the participant judges. It was stated that there are 2 kinds of Courts- Constitutional Courts, i.e., Hon'ble Supreme Court of India as well as High Courts of the respective states and Statutory Courts, i.e., the Subordinate or Lower Courts in District including the civil, criminal and revenue courts. It was also highlighted that there also exist various tribunals, gram nyayalayas, mobile courts and mobile lokadalats as well.

Further, Justice Goel pointed out a few differences that exist between the Hon'ble Supreme Court of India and that of Bangladesh, such as separate independent existence of the Hon'ble

Supreme Court of India and that of the High Courts of respective states, which is not the case in Bangladesh, the concept of Special Leave Petition under Article 136 of The Constitution of India, curative petitions, collegium system etc.

The session then came to an end with the marvelous words of Justice Sinha, “Develop your thinking, have a broader perspective and try to grow as a judge.”

SESSION 3 & 4

THEME- GOALS, ROLE AND MISSION OF COURTS:

CONSTITUTIONAL VISION OF JUSTICE

SPEAKERS: Justice A.K. Goel, Justice Navin Sinha, Prof. Vijay Kumar.

The session was based on the concept of justice in a broader sense with special emphasis on constitutional vision of justice. It began by discussing the idea of 'Justice' in the context of constitutional vision. The Constitution of India aims at bringing a social revolution, eradicating all the social evils from the society and ensuring the happiness of the last person. The Constitution promotes justice (social, economic and political) and assures the same to its citizens. Thus it could be stated that an idea of a just and egalitarian society remains one of the foremost objectives of the Constitution.

The speakers pointed out that the role of the Courts should be to spread awareness of justice, ensuring access of justice to all, dispensing justice and also devising a system for speedy disposal of cases.

Citing the landmark cases of Maneka Gandhi v. Union of India, [AIR 1978 SC 597] and that of Hussainara Khatoon & Ors vs Home Secretary, State Of Bihar [AIR 1979 SC 1369], Justice Goel emphasized the importance of 'Right To Speedy Trial' and requested the participant judges to try to dispense justice as soon as possible in their home-country as well.

A brief discussion was done on the emerging concepts of plea bargaining and remand cases in respect of India as well as Bangladesh.

The final part of the session concluded with an interactive session with the participants expressing their views as to what is the concept of justice according to them.

A few other points of discussion are:

- Videography during the police investigation.
- Judicial mechanism in the environmental issues.
- Significance and composition of National green tribunal.
- Media intervention in judicial functioning.

Finally Justice Sinha, emphasizing on the importance of justice and its delivery, concluded that Lower Judiciary is responsible for the image of entire judicial system and thus they should always act in accordance with the principles of justice.

DAY-3

SESSION 5

THEME-JUDGE THE MASTER OF THE COURT: COURT MANAGEMENT & CASE MANAGEMENT

SPEAKERS- Justice Deepak Gupta, Justice A.M. Sapre

“Imagination is more important than knowledge”, these ravishing words by Justice Deepak Gupta marked the beginning of the very first session of the day. Expressing the views on ‘Efficient Court Management’, it was said that the judges should have an imaginative instinctive to go beyond the law and think out of the box. Various objectives of Good Management were noted to be:

- Optimum use of human and material resources.
- Speedy production.
- Production at minimum cost, and
- Good Judgment.

The need to learn the art of managing oneself before managing others was pressed upon. Various ways through which one can manage himself/ herself were pointed out to be:

- Time Management.
- Self-disciplined approach.
- Dressing Sense.
- Be methodical.
- Set targets for yourself.
- Think about the ways through which one can work for the system.

It was observed that ‘Management is nothing more than motivating other people.’ Further, ways were laid down as to how judges can manage the court staff. A few of those ways include:

- Training of the staff.
- Ensuring that right job is given to the right person.
- Ensuring that each person does the work allocated to him.

- Incentives.
- Encouragement.
- Expressing of gratitude.
- Criticizing in private and praising in public.
- Periodical scrutiny.
- Regular monitoring.
- Ensuring discipline.
- Ensuring Punctuality.
- Time Management.
- Disciplinary Action.
- A pat on the back.

Coming to the facet of ‘Case Management’, following ‘ways-out’ were mentioned:

- Fixing of similar class of cases together.
- Maintaining Proper dockets/ case diaries.
- Following case flow rules.
- Monitoring of pendency and disposal.
- Giving priority to women, children, senior citizens and under-trials.

Highlighting the importance of both management as well as leadership, it was quoted that “Management is doing things right; leadership is doing the right things.” In the same line, the core qualities of a leader were discussed.

Further, the importance of technical area such as I.T. and NJDG was also conveyed to the participant judges.

The session, thus came to an end with the words of Justice Raghuram wherein he very rightly stated that while managing the court and cases, the judges should also spend time creating happy moments with their family so as to cherish forever.

SESSION 6

THEME-JUDGING SKILLS: ART, CRAFT AND SCIENCE OF DRAFTING JUDGMENTS

SPEAKERS- Justice Deepak Gupta, Justice A.M. Sapre

“Good judgement comes from experience, and experience comes from bad judgement”, these words clearly express the essence of this session.

The speakers very beautifully explained that judgement writing is an art that is to be developed through perseverance and experience. The judgement of Lord Denning in the case of Croke & Another v/s Wiseman & Another [1982] 1 WLR 7 was quoted, stating that it is one of the best judgements the eminent speakers have come across in their life. It has been so marvelously written in simple, precise and concise language so as to give the idea of the case in its entirety.

This was followed by an interactive session in which the participant judges were asked about the problems that they face while writing judgements. The queries were accordingly resolved by the resource persons. Further, the resource persons gave very helpful advices to the participant judges to live their professional life happily and without any hue and cry.

Talking about the importance of the Courts of 1st instance, it was conveyed that there is no ‘subordinate judiciary’ or ‘higher judiciary’ but only ‘district judiciary’ and ‘high court judiciary’. It was also stated that ultimately every Court is a Constitutional Court and the judges of lower judiciary are the ambassadors of the entire Judiciary as it is they who are the ‘face of the judiciary’ to the public.

Finally, the session concluded with the saying that “Beauty of a good judgement is original thoughts, original discussion, original reasoning and ultimately originality of the case.”

SESSION 7

THEME- ELEMENTS OF JUDICIAL BEHAVIOUR-ETHICS, NEUTRALITY AND PROFESSIONALISM

SPEAKERS- Justice Deepak Gupta, Justice A.M. Sapre

“It is easy to become a judge, difficult to become a good judge, very difficult to become a very good judge and extremely difficult to become an outstanding judge”, these words embarked the beginning of this rejuvenating session wherein ethics, neutrality and professionalism were discussed in detail. It was stated that as a judge, one is put to test everyday by 5 stakeholders: yourself; litigants; lawyers; colleagues and society, so judges should always try to remain ethical as well as professional in their work. The judges were asked to always choose the latter from among the two: A good judgement with bad intention and a bad judgement with good intention, because one can improve the efficiency with time and so in no case should they compromise with their ethics.

The biographies of some of the greatest justices in the history of Indian judiciary such as Justice Chagla and Justice Hidaytullah were being discussed. Quoting one of the statements of Justice Chagla, i.e., “In my entire life, I did not expect or accept anything.”, it was made clear that the lives of these eminent personalities set an example before each and every judge to serve the public with pure heart and to never ever do anything that the conscience does not approve of. After all, ‘conscience that remains untroubled is extra pay!’

The words of Justice Raghuram that ‘Your judgement is your only visiting card’, makes it crystal clear that a judge is known only and only by the judgements that (s)he delivers. It must be kept in mind that the work of a judge is not to establish peace in the society but to resolve the ever-arising conflicts because many a times silence can be oppressive. While writing a judgement, initially one follows the classical style, then (s)he builds competence and creates his/her own style.

It is to be understood that one cannot understand law by reading law alone. With experience, the individual ought to develop and the same applies to judges. Judges should have a long term philosophy in life, but not a short term ideology. The session ended with the happy remark that one should always be passionate about reading and music, this adds to the quality of life.

LOCAL TOUR

VISIT TO TRIBAL MUSEUM/ STATE MUSEUM, Bhopal

3rd November, 2019

There are several museums in the city of lakes which have a lot of unheard truth of bygone era in its folds and Bhopal's diversity is clearly reflected in its museums. Among those, the biggest attractions here are Tribal museum and the State Museum. The participant judges today made a visit to the two museums of Bhopal located on Shyamal hills. They are the beautiful specimens of architecture.

The Tribal museum in Bhopal is very thoughtfully planned and the entire campus is theme based right from its entrance. Every art work has some meaning to it which is beautifully depicted but difficult to decipher without basic knowledge of the tribes. Best way to understand is ask for a copy of their colorful brochure which describes meaning of all the major artifact in Hindi. The well planned campus is divided into 6 galleries depicting Cultural Diversity, Tribal Life, Tribal Art, Tribal Mythology, Tribals of Chattisgarh and Tribal Games. It also has Art Exhibition Gallery and Open Air Theatre. All the artifacts in Galleries are majorly taken from 7 major and most important tribes of state namely Gond, Bheel, Korku, Kol, Bharia, Baiga and Saharia. All these galleries were enthusiastically visited by the participant judges and the background of the same was explained to them by the tour guide over there.

The state museum of Bhopal contains outstanding art pieces & rare antiquities of Madhya Pradesh and the display over there is simply eye-catching. The traditions, arts and cultures of the state of Madhya Pradesh that are now somewhere in oblivion were marvelously exhibited over there. There are, altogether 17 galleries in this beautiful building which are comprised of various subjects include thematic gallery, pre-history & fossils, excavated materials, metal images, inscriptions, sculptures, royal collections, textiles, freedom movement, postal stamps, autographs, manuscripts, paintings, coins, weapons, documents of medieval age and rare musical instruments. The participant judges made a visit to each and every gallery and the significance behind all of these was also explained to them.

DAY 4

SESSION 8

THEME-PRINCIPLES OF EVIDENCE: APPRECIATION IN CIVIL AND CRIMINAL CASES

SPEAKERS- Justice B.S. Chauhan; Justice A.M. Thipsay

The session started with throwing a ray of light upon the development of the Indian Evidence Act that has taken place till date. It was observed that the basic structure of the Indian Evidence Act and the Bangladesh Evidence Act is identical in nature. It was observed that Evidence Act must be read as a whole. The meaning of ‘appreciation of evidence’ was analyzed to be ‘assessing and recognizing the importance, quality and nature of the evidence.’

This was followed by an in-depth discussion of Section 1, Section 3, Section 17, Section 26, Section 53, Section 54, Section 60, Section 115, and Section 117 of The Indian Evidence Act. It was commented that the entire Indian Evidence Act is based on ‘probability’, however the degree varies. It was stated that the Evidence Act applies to both civil as well as criminal cases with a few exceptional cases of course.

Talking about the principle of ‘Proving beyond reasonable doubt’ in criminal cases, it was stated that such a principle has been nowhere mentioned in the Evidence Act, and is the product of judicial pronouncements. It is so because in criminal cases, the right of an individual under Article 21 is violated when sent to jail.

The need to learn how to appreciate law while appreciating the evidence was also pointed out. The judges should always keep the ‘principles of natural justice’ in their mind. And, while writing any order/ judgement, one should not merely read the facts and law but also apply his/ her own mind. In fact, non-application of mind makes it mis-appreciation of evidences rather than appreciation of evidences.’

In this regard, various instances and illustrations of applicability and non-applicability of mind were stated.

Discussing about the contradiction in the statements of the witnesses, it was observed that one should not go into the depth of the contradiction until and unless the said contradiction is so grave there is nothing to support the said statements. It was further clarified that cross-examination is to find out the veracity of the person whereas re-examination is for the clarification and not filling of the gaps. It was also stated that ‘The Last Seen Theory’ is a circumstantial evidence and not direct one.

SESSION 9

THEME-EVIDENTIARY PRESUMPTION, ONUS AND BURDEN OF PROOF

SPEAKERS: Justice B.S. Chauhan, Justice A.M. Thipsay.

This session commenced with exploring the terms like evidence, proof and presumption. It was made clear that an evidence is a means to make the court believe in a particular thing, however proof is used to convince the court to come into a particular conclusion.

The three major principles of evidence were noted to be relevant evidence, best evidence and keeping aside the 'hear-say'. It was stated that 'reliability and probability' are the two main pillars of a strong evidence. While discussing about the identification evidence, it was said that it is a weak type of evidence which is used in case of unknown offenders and thus involves a lot of mental process. It was stated that 'hear-say' evidences are weak type of evidences, however 'dying declaration' under Section 32, Indian Evidence Act is an exception to the same.

Throwing light on the concept of Confession of Accused, it was pointed out that the confession of accused by police is not admissible because of Constitutional vision. Such a practice is a type of self-incrimination and hence is against the Constitutional rights.

Talking about the assessing the value of evidence, it was highlighted that the Apex Court has classified witnesses into three categories: 'wholly reliable'; 'wholly unreliable' and 'neither wholly reliable nor wholly unreliable'.

Revisiting the concepts of presumption, onus and burden of proof, it was said that 'presumption of innocence' is the basic rule and basic attribute of fair trial. In the continuation of same, various illustrations and instances were discussed by the speakers. Commenting on Sec. 101, Indian Evidence Act, it was said that the onus lies on the party which asserted it and one cannot ask the accused to state/ confess otherwise. The accused is provided certain rights under the provisions of the Constitution, i.e., Article 20(3) (Right against self-incrimination) and Article 22(Protection against arrest and detention in certain cases). However, there are certain statutory exemptions to the said provision. In cases of heinous crimes, the existence of mental state is already presumed. A few examples of such a case are offences under Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988; Narcotics and Drugs Act, 1985; Prevention of Children against Sexual Offences Act, 2012, etc.

Further, the two kinds of presumption, i.e., presumption of fact and presumption of law were discussed in detail with citing of certain provisions of the Indian Evidence Act, various examples and illustrations.

Pressing upon the importance of doing justice, the speakers strongly recommended that judges should always be careful while adjudicating. They should never punish the innocent just because crimes and criminals need to be eradicated from the society. A grave concern was expressed vis-à-vis delivering justice since there exists threats to appreciation of evidences because of various pressures on the judges.

Further, discussing about the applicability of Evidence Act, it was revealed that there are many parts of the Nation, particularly the tribal areas, where the general laws are not applicable and this is because of historical and traditional reasons of the respective areas.

Session concluded with remarkable words, i.e., ‘There is no watertight formula for the evaluation of evidences and the judges will have to apply their mind efficiently and wisely so as appreciate the evidences.’

SESSION 10

THEME-ELECTRONIC EVIDENCE: NEW HORIZONS, COLLECTION, PRESERVATION AND APPRECIATION

SPEAKERS: Mr. Yashpal Singh, Justice B.S. Chauhan, Justice A.M. Thipsay.

The new horizons in the field of electronic evidences marked the beginning of this session. The meaning and nature of electronic evidences were discussed in the light of the various provisions of I.T. Act, 2000. Pressing upon the importance of the electronic evidences, it was stated that such kind of evidences cannot be discarded on the probability of being manipulated. The law has to develop and become smarter than the offenders. It was observed that with an increase in the cyber-crimes, the concept of electronic evidence is growing at a rapid rate. “Source” and “Authenticity” of electronic evidence was discussed in detail. Various examples and illustrations were cited to explain the disciplines of cyber-crime and electronic evidences.

Further, the meaning, nature and importance of the primary and secondary evidences were discussed in detail. Citing the case of Anvar PV v. PK Basheer [(2014) 10 SCC 473], it was made clear that ‘If e-record has been produced as a primary evidence u/ Sec. 62, Indian Evidence Act, then the same is admissible without the condition of Section 65B (Admissibility of e-records)’. In the same line the two provisions, i.e., Section 62 and Section 65B were discussed in detail with mentioning of cases like Kundan Singh v. State[2015 lawsuit (Delhi) 5843] and K Ramajayam@ Appu v. Inspector of Police [2016 (2) CTC 135].

This was followed by a discussion on the ‘principle of gate-keeper’ with special emphasis on the case of Daubert v. Merrell Dow Pharmaceuticals, [Inc., 509 U.S. 579 (1993)]. Next, a demonstration was made so as to detect the originality of e-mails. This paved way for the saying that goes well with the notion in hand, i.e., ‘A man may lie but not the machine.’

The session thus came to an end in the wake of the fact that electronic evidences play a crucial role in investigation in this technologically advanced world.

SESSION 11

THEME-FORENSIC EVIDENCE IN CIVIL AND CRIMINAL TRIALS; DNA PROFILING

SPEAKERS: Justice B.S. Chauhan, Justice A.M. Thipsay, Dr. TD Dogra, Mr. Raghvendra Ku. Vidua.

The session started with light being shed upon the role of forensic evidence in civil and criminal trials. Forensic Science is the application of knowledge of science in aid to the administration of justice. The relation between the Constitutional Rights and application of forensic science was highlighted by stating the fact that the disclosing of privacy of an individual via DNA test results in violation of the mandate of Article 21, i.e., Right to dignified life. In the light of 2005 amendment of the Indian Evidence Act, it was mentioned that there is a limit up to which DNA testing can be allowed and generally it is for the identification of criminal. In the same regard, the extent of approach of investigating team so as to not to violate right to privacy as well as right to dignified life was questioned.

Marking the nature of humans to be justice lovers, the collaborative approach followed in forensic science was highlighted. Forensic science is a multi-disciplinary subject in which one discipline may be all-together different from the other. Here, the opinions are of three types, viz., evidences based, inferences base and truth finding.

The notion of DNA profiling was discussed. DNA becomes relevant in adjudicating matters relating to identification, disputed paternity/maternity, abduction, inheritance, adoption, rape, murder etc. DNA as an evidence is scientific and unbiased and is thus highly reliable. The chemical structure of DNA was explained through a few slides. It was pointed out that the chemical structure of everyone's DNA is same, the only thing that makes the difference is 'order of base pairs'.

The use of DNA in cracking down a case was demonstrated through a number of high profile cases such as the Rajiv Gandhi assassination, Sheena Bora murder, Arushi Talwar murder, etc.

Discussing about the Scene of Crime, the importance of DNA profiling, forensic sciences in solving the legal cases, the '2009 Shopian Rape and Murder case' of the state of Jammu & Kashmir was explained in detail. The autopsy report, post-mortem report, DNA tests, examination of various organs of the body, etc. were discussed in detail.

In the same regard, the types of evidences that can be collected from the Scene of Crime were pointed out to be documentary and non-documentary evidences, material and non-material evidences, testimonial evidences, physical and non-physical evidences, direct and indirect evidences, conditional evidences, circumstantial evidences, real and demonstrative evidences, known and unknown evidences, individual and class evidences, etc.

A few challenges and limitations that are faced by the forensic science specialists as well as DNA Bill, 2019 were mentioned. The session hereby came to an end, very well proving the saying that “Dead men tell tales....

You need an ear to hear them.”

DAY 5

SESSION 12

THEME-CRIMINAL JUSTICE ADMINISTRATION AND HUMAN RIGHTS

SPEAKERS: Justice Manju Goel, Prof. V.K. Dixit.

The session began with pressing upon the importance of the Fundamental Rights as well as Human Rights from the point of view of democracy, liberty, rule of law etc.

The traditional theories of law such as the divine theory, the philosophy of John Locke and Emanuel Kant were visited. The inalienability of rights from the human life was explained through the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, 1948 and The British Constitution.

In the system of Criminal Justice Administration, there are 3 phases, i.e., pre-trial, court proceedings and the outcome of the proceedings. The concept of “Criminal Justice Administration” during the period of colonial rule was discussed. It was observed that “Criminal Justice Administration” during the colonial period was enacted to serve the interests of the colonial government and not the society. It was observed that the methodology followed in British era is still being followed i.e. sending accused to prison. And here lies the biggest challenge in our system, i.e., the attitude of police. Though, we have been freed from the clutches of the colonial rulers, our system and minds continue to be their slaves. However, the situation is changing for good gradually so as to adopt a restitutive system based on the Gandhian ideology of ‘Hate the sin, and not the sinner.’

The role of judiciary as an authority for providing justice in criminal cases was deliberated upon. It was observed that “Criminal Justice Administration” needed to be viewed through the prism of human rights. It was pondered upon that rights of an accused does not stand terminated even when he is convicted, he is entitled to fundamental rights of an accused person and other basic human rights. Right to free legal aid, right to fair trial and right to legal representation were also discussed in the light of the Constitutional provisions while throwing light on the cases of Md.Ajmal Md.Amir Kasab @Abu ... vs State Of Maharashtra and Aarushi Talwar murder case.

Right against self-incrimination under Article 20(3) and Right to dignified life under Article 21 of the Constitution of India was discussed in detail with emphasis laid in cases such as Maneka Gandhi vs Union of India, Sunil Batra vs Delhi Administration and Hussainara Khatoon vs State of Bihar. All these cases involved the common element of “Criminal Justice Administration” viewed through the prism of human rights. It was observed that “Criminal Justice Administration” can also be termed as social engineering by judiciary. The session concluded with the main theme of session being “How robust is Indian Constitution and to what extent it guarantees “Criminal Justice Administration”.

SESSION 13

THEME-HUMAN RIGHTS: FAIR AND IMPARTIAL INVESTIGATION

SPEAKERS: Justice Manju Goel, Prof. V.K. Dixit.

The session started with light being shed upon the investigation process being followed in India and Bangladesh. The concept of human rights was discussed and it was observed that “fair and impartial investigation” is a facet of human rights and are necessary since laws are crucial notions of the society. “Free and impartial investigation” is a right enshrined under Article 21 of the Constitution of India, the importance of which in both civil as well as criminal matters was discussed in detail. The right of “fair and impartial investigation” was also discussed in the light of International conventions such as United Declaration for Human Rights and International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights. It was further elaborated that fair and impartial investigation requires that the judge collects all the facts and convert it into the processed reality. Correct facts and correct appreciation of law is very important for drawing human conclusions.

The basic human rights of a person in police custody, i.e., the accused were elaborately discussed. It was stated that the Criminal Procedure Code of both the nations are entirely for the benefit of the accused. But now the pendulum is shifting towards the victims which is commonly termed as victimology so as to ensure that accused have all the rights but on the same page victims and their plight is not overlooked. Now, it becomes the responsibility of the Court to maintain the equilibrium.

It was pointed out that there are 3 grades of truth, i.e., apparent truth, processed reality and absolute reality. The way judges perceive things has to be changed. Talking about the extremely heinous crimes such as rape, it was stated that the lone testimony of the victim is enough to convict the criminal provided it is trustworthy. Similarly, in certain cases of custodial violence, custodial rape, dowry death, rape under false presumption/ promise, etc., where it is very difficult to prove the guilt of the accused, the burden of proving the innocence has been shifted to the accused himself/ herself. The train has now come towards the restitutive approach and in the same line, the rape victims are provided compensation, counselling, etc. The motive behind such an approach is not to compare the dignity of women with money but to stand by the victims in every possible way. The case of R. v. Williams (1923) 1 KB 340, wherein the accused was a choirmaster who had sexual intercourse with his 16-year-old student making her believe that he is performing a surgical operation to improve her singing voice was held guilty of rape, was also discussed.

Commenting on the dynamism of the society, it was said that we are social doctors and have to act as per the dynamic society. Laws may be static but processes should keep changing. Bringing the shift of the session towards the economic offences, it was said that such offences are against the public at large and thus the attitude of the stakeholders of the criminal justice system cannot be lenient. Other such cases where stringent rules and processes are expected are offences under Insolvency and Bankruptcy Code, 2016; Prevention of Money Laundering Act, 2002; Pre-Conception and Pre-Natal Diagnostic Techniques Act, 1994; Medical Termination of Pregnancy Act, 1971, etc.

Further, analyzing the changes that have come in the facet of testimonial discrepancies, it was commented that such discrepancies are to be seen only if they are material in nature. Further, the case of Rudul Sah v. State of Bihar, (1983) 4 SCC 141 was discussed so as to point out the plight of innocent prisoners and the vulnerable condition of the police system.

This was followed by an interactive discussion on the procedure followed in case of foreign offenders, particularly Bangladeshi offenders. With this, the session came to an end.

SESSION 14

THEME- ICT ANND E-JUDICIARY

SPEAKERS: Mr. Atul Kaushik, Justice Manju Goel, Prof. V.K. Dixit.

Mr. Atul Kaushik commenced this session by putting question to the participant judges as to what is the status of ICT and e-judiciary in Bangladesh. With this, various digital facilities available in the judiciary of Bangladesh came into light. This was followed by an insightful discussion as to what ICT is and how it is useful in bringing transparency in the courts. The fact that ‘e-judiciary’ doesn’t exist anywhere in the world and that it is just a term coined by the academicians was highlighted. It simply means ICT enabled judiciary. The Indian perspective of e-judiciary is no different from the global perspective.

In the course of discussion, the benefits of use of technology were stated to be as follows:

- Offers courts a crucial commodity information.
- Helps in overcoming the handicap of less human and financial resources.
- Reduces hours of operation, and
- Optimizes courts location.

In furtherance of the same, the pre-requisites to harness technology were pointed out to be:

- Identify the need of judges, lawyers and litigants.
- Examine process re-engineering opportunities.
- Migrate from document to content management.

All this practiced together improves the quality of justice, access to justice, public trust and confidence in the court as an institution.

Various objectives of the e-courts in India are:

- To enhance judicial productivity-both qualitatively and quantitatively, to make the justice delivery system affordable, accessible, cost-effective and transparent.
- To make policy for managing cases for effective court and case management system.

- To provide inter-operability and compatibility with various stake-holders in the justice system.
- To develop, install and implement decision support system in courts.
- To automate the processes to provide transparency of information access to its stake holders.

The discussion went on to analyze the historical background of the Information Technology and its arrival to the courts in India with special focus on the achievements of Phase I (2004) and Phase II (2015) of the e-Courts project. The key strategies for phase II were that it was designed to be citizen centric with the core-periphery model and through Free and Open Software System. Certain other key additional components of the Phase II were discussed in detail. Discussing the way further it was stated that e-Committee has paved the way for phase-III in which technologies such as 5G application, artificial intelligence, augmented reality, machine translation, mobile collaboration, speech recognition will be implemented to ensure a more transparent and accountable judiciary.

It was further highlighted that India has a system of Universal Computerization of Courts through National Judicial Data Grid (NJDG). The NJDG works as a monitoring tool to identify, manage & reduce pendency of cases. The court data is made available through the National Judicial Data Grid at E-Courts website. The Supreme Court started this with a vision to transform the Indian Judiciary by Information and Communication Technology (ICT) enablement of Courts. Thereafter, the resource persons gave demo of the working of NJDG online on screen and illustrated its use.

Talking about the assistance of judicial officers/ staff, it was stated that the management manuals, master trainers and NIC Pune Team is ever ready to provide assistance. Lastly, after answering to the queries raised by the participants, the session was concluded.

LOCAL TOUR

VISIT TO THE CENTAL JAIL, Bhopal

5thNovember, 2019

The participant judges today made a visit to the Central Jail of Bhopal so as to get an idea about the Indian Police System and the Indian Criminal Justice System. They were welcomed by the Assistant Jail Superintendent Mr. Sunil Baiswade and then were being guided by the staff of the jail.

The Central Jail of Bhopal witnesses marvelous natural beauty. It was well maintained. The judges were being informed that this building of Central Jail has two blocks- Block A and B. The participant judges were then taken for a jail round, wherein they observed the Jail Dispensary, the music school, kitchen, various factories established for generating employment among the inmates such as painting, fabrication, furniture, carpentry, screen painting, printing press, handmade crafts, etc. Apart from this, the procedure and system followed in the jail was also conveyed to the participant judges and all the doubts were kindly resolved by the staff.

This brought the day to an end.

DAY 6

SESSION 15

THEME-IDENTIFICATION OF RATIO IN A PRECEDENT

SPEAKERS: Justice Ved Prakash, Prof. V.K. Dixit.

The session commenced with throwing the ray of light on ‘the theory of precedent’. Common law doctrine of binding precedent is based on ‘stare decisis et non qui eta movere’ meaning ‘to stand by decided matters and not disturb settled points’. The same doctrine is applicable to both India and Bangladesh. It was stated that the mandatory part of ‘stare decisis’ is an idea that evolved and conceptualized in Great Britain because there were scarcity of laws. As per the continental system of law, precedents are only persuasive in nature and not binding.

It was further opined that the Court delivering the judgment will never mention as to what is ratio decidendi and what is obiter dicta, it is up to the Court applying/ analyzing it. It was explained that precedent is a judicial decision which in itself is a principle. The underlying principle which forms its authoritative element is often termed as the ratio decidendi in a particular case. In other words, ratio is that part of the judgment which was absolutely necessary to resolve the said dispute. The concrete decision is binding between the parties to it. Thus, the law of precedents play a very important role in the decision making process of a judge and help the courts to stand as an adequate means in the disposal of the judicial administration system. On the other hand, ‘obiter dicta’ are the things said ‘by the way’ and are not necessary to the decision. The difference between ratio decidendi and obiter dicta was then explained to the participants.

Elucidating the statement that ‘through precedents, judiciary makes law and there is nothing to be apologetic about it’, it was further explained that ratio decidendi of a precedent becomes a law when there is gap in any prevalent law or such a situation has arose which the legislature could not have ever comprehend that it would arise and therefore no law exists in regards to the same. It was stated that precedents and new law making is very important part of the judiciary.

Shedding light on the evolution of fault liability into strict liability and ultimately into absolute liability, the cases of Rylands v. Fletcher, Union Carbide Corporation v. Union Of India (Bhopal gas Tragedy) and M.C. Mehta v. UOI (Olium gas leak case) were discussed in detail. In the same line, the case of Donoghue v. Stevenson (Ginger beer Case) was elaborated with special emphasis laid on its criticism for opining the ‘neighbor’s rule’.

The speaker then explained the method of identifying ratio from a binding precedent in the light of the landmark judgments of S.I. Rooplal & Anr v. Lt. Governor through Chief Secretary, Delhi & Ors. [AIR 2000 SC 6594] and Delhi Administration (Now NCT of Delhi) v. Manohar Lal [2002 7 SCC 222]. It was conveyed that finding ratio decidendi is not a mechanical process but an art which one gradually acquires through practice. It is to be determined by applying ‘The Inversion test’ commonly known as ‘The Wambough Test’.

Lastly, through the cases of Keshavanand Bharti v. State of Kerela, and The Constitution Bench of S.C. in Islamic Academy of Education & Anr. v. State of Karnataka & Ors., the method of finding out ratio decidendi, in case decision is given on more than one ground or by multiple judges, was elaborated.

SESSION 16 & 17

THEME- LANDMARK JUDGEMENTS IN INDIA

SPEAKERS: Justice Ved Prakash, Prof. V.K. Dixit.

The session started with light being shed upon the development of legal system in India. It was further deliberated that with the passage of time, there have been judgments which changed the landscape of political, civil, social and economic rights in India. Quoting Peter Ronald D'souza, "Great judgement is one that restores the Constitutional value", it was stated that landmark judgments are the ones that are path-breaking.

The entire session was then focused on discussing the landmark judgements under 6 major heads.

The judgments that changed the history of Indian laws vis-à-vis Personal liberty: Procedure established by Law under Article 21 are discussed herein.

The case of A.K. Gopalan v. State of Madras [(1950) SCC 88], popularly known as preventive detention case, was discussed. A.K. Gopalan was a communist leader who was detained in the Madras Jail under Preventive Detention Act, 1950 and challenged his detention by stating that his civil liberty was being hampered as he had the right to equality of law and thus this detention is violates contravenes Articles 13, 19, 21 and 22 of The Constitution of India. However, the Hon'ble Supreme Court of India held that Article 22 is a self-contained code, hence police can arrest any person followed by a procedure, even if the procedure is arbitrary in nature. The supreme court at that point of time believed that each article was separate in the Indian constitution.

Another immensely crucial judgment is that of Maneka Gandhi v. UOI [AIR 1978 SC 597]. In this case, the meaning and content of the words 'personal liberty' came up for the consideration before the Supreme Court. In this case, the petitioner's passport had been impounded by the Central Government u/s 10(3) (c) of the Passport Act, 1967. Here, the Supreme Court not only overruled A.K. Gopalan's case but also widened the scope of words 'personal liberty' considerably. Thus a law "depriving a person of 'personal liberty' has not only to stand the test" of Article 21 but it must stand the test of Art. 19 and Art. 14 of the Constitution as well.

Next case is ADM Jabalpur v. Shivakant Shukla [(1976) 2 SCC 521]. This one case is a glaring example of how the four wise Judges of the Supreme Court tried to outdo themselves in being more loyal to the throne than the king himself. The final order goes way beyond what was demanded of them by the plea of the Union of India. All the individual judgments of Ray (C.J.), Beg, Chandrachud & Bhagwati (JJ) record in extenso the submissions of the Attorney-General on behalf of the government wherein he made the claim that the detenu had no right to approach the Court to challenge his detention. The Supreme Court, instead, preferred to throw away this key to their own self-respect. The majority judgment, literally taken, and as understood thereafter by all High Courts, clearly directed that detenues were to be stopped at the doors if not in the corridors of the halls of Justice. However, Justice Khanna, in his powerful dissent, held that Article 21 could not be considered to be the sole repository of the right to life and personal liberty, and such right could not be taken away under any circumstance without the authority of law, in a society governed by rule of law. He elaborated in detail all the points in consideration and concluded that even in the absence of article 21 in the Constitution, the State has got no power to deprive a person of his life or liberty without.

In the case of Justice K. S. Puttaswamy (Retd.) and Anr. vs Union Of India And Ors [(2017) 10 SCC 1], over-ruling the majority view of ADM Jabalpur Case, it was held that "Right to Privacy is a fundamental right mentioned under Article 21 of the Constitution".

The landmark judgments under the umbrella of Amendability of Fundamental Rights and doctrine of basic structure are discussed below.

In the case of Shankari Prasad vs. Union of India [(1952) SCR 89], the First Constitution Amendment Act, 1951 was challenged. The amendment was challenged on the ground that it violates the Part-III of the constitution and therefore, should be considered invalid. The Supreme Court held that the Parliament, under Article 368, has the power to amend any part of the constitution including fundamental rights. The Court gave the same ruling in Sajjan Singh Vs State of Rajasthan case in 1965 [AIR 1965 SC 845].

In Golak Nath vs State of Punjab [AIR 1967 BSC 1643], the Supreme Court overruled its earlier decision and held that the Parliament has no power to amend Part III of the constitution as the fundamental rights are transcendental and immutable. According to the Supreme Court ruling, Article 368 only lays down the procedure to amend the constitution and does not give absolute powers to the parliament to amend any part of the constitution.

The Parliament, in 1971, passed the 24th Constitution Amendment Act. The act gave the absolute power to the parliament to make any changes in the constitution including the fundamental rights. It also made it obligatory for the President to give his assent on all the Constitution Amendment bills sent to him.

In 1973, in Kesavananda Bharti vs. State of Kerala [AIR 1973 SC 1461], the Supreme Court upheld the validity of the 24th Constitution Amendment Act by reviewing its decision in Golaknath case. The Supreme Court held that the Parliament has power to amend any provision of the constitution, but doing so, the basic structure of the constitution is to be maintained. But the Apex Court did not give any clear definition of the basic structure. It held that the "basic structure of the Constitution could not be abrogated even by a constitutional amendment". In the judgement, some of the basic features of the Constitution, which were listed by the judges.

In Indira Gandhi vs.. Raj Narain [AIR 1975 SC 2299], the validity of 39th Constitutional Amendment Act was challenged. The Supreme Court reaffirmed its concept of basic structure and thus held the said amendment act to be invalid.

In the case of Minerva Mills vs. Union of India [AIR 1980 SC 1789], the validity of 42nd Constitutional Amendment Act, 1976 was challenged and the Court struck down Art. 368(4) and Art. 368(5). Thus, the concept of basic structure was further developed by adding 'judicial review' and the 'balance between Fundamental Rights and Directive Principles' to the basic structure of the Constitution.

Further, in IR Coelho's Case [(2007) 2 SCC 1], commonly known as 9th schedule case, the doctrine of basic structure was further interpreted. It was held that any law inserted in the 9th schedule on or after April 24, 1973 can be subject to judicial review and will be struck down if it violates the basic structure doctrine.

This was followed by the cases being discussed under the head of 'Constitutional Democracy: Power under Article 365'.

In S.R Bommai vs Union of India, [AIR 1994 SC 1918], SC attempted to curb the blatant issue of Article 365 of the Constitution of India. In the same regards, Federal structure, unity and integrity of India, secularism, socialism, social justice and judicial review were reiterated as basic features of the Constitution of India and it was held that majority enjoyed by the C.O.M. shall be tested on the floor of the house.

In PUCL v. Union of India, commonly known as NOTA case the constitutional validity of Rules 41(2), (3) and 49-O of the Conduct of Election Rules, 1961, was impugned. Both sides agreed on the fact that the combined effect of these rules was that persons who did not vote in elections were recorded (by the presiding officer) as having not voted. So the Supreme Court, in PUCL v. Union of India, upheld the constitutional right of citizens to cast a negative vote in elections.

In the case of Lily Thomas v. UOI & Ors [(2013) 7 SCC 653], a 2 Judge bench of the Supreme Court ruled that Members of Parliament, Legislative Councils and Legislative Assemblies convicted of crimes where they had been awarded a minimum sentence of 2 years imprisonment would cease to be members of the house to which they were elected from the date of sentencing. It further struck down the provision, which allowed convicted members a 3 month time period for appeal against the conviction and sentencing and held that those convicted would suffer immediate disqualification.

This was followed by a discussion of plethora of cases on the concept of 'Independence of Judiciary'.

In S.P. Gupta v. UOI & Ors. [AIR 1982 SC 149], commonly known as First Judges Case, the Hon'ble Supreme Court of India held that the correspondence exchanged between the Law Minister, the Chief Justice of Delhi, and the Chief Justice of India on the appointment and transfer of judges was not privileged and was therefore not protected from disclosure under the law. A particular document regarding the affairs of the state is only immune from disclosure when disclosure is clearly contrary to public interest.

In the case of Supreme Court Advocates on Record Association v. Union of India [(1993) 4 SCC 441], commonly known as second judges case, the court (7-2) overruled the First Judges Case, holding that in the event of conflict between the President and the CJI with regard to appointments of Judges, it was the Chief Justice of India whose opinion would not only have primacy, but would be determinative in the matter. In the 1993 verdict, the SC not only regained its powers from the government but also gave itself the upper hand over the other two branches. The 1993 verdict also gave birth to the Collegium System. This was the collection of the CJI and the two most senior judges of the SC or the HC, depending on the case. What this did was in effect “moderate” the CJI’s powers when it comes to the appointment of judges.

Then in Re Special Reference Case, commonly known as Third Judges Case [AIR 1999 SC 1], the SC reaffirmed its 1993 judgement and expanded the Collegium to include the CJI and the four most-senior judges of the court after the CJI.

Finally the S.C. Advocates on Record Association v. UOI [(2016) 5 SCC 1], commonly known as NJAC case or the fourth judges case, is the first instance in which the Court has struck down a part of the framework of the Constitution. Rather than striking down a discreet provision addressing the method by which judges are appointed through the NJAC, the Court chose to strike down the appointments regime in its entirety.

Lastly, talking about the social welfare legislations, the cases regarding the condition of women and homosexuals were discussed.

The Mohd. Ahmad Khan vs. Shah Bano Begum & Ors. or the Shah Bano maintenance case is seen as one of the legal milestones in battle for protection of rights of Muslim women. While the Supreme Court upheld the right to alimony in the case, the judgment set off a political battle as well as a controversy about the extent to which courts can interfere in Muslim personal law. The case laid the ground for Muslim women’s fight for equal rights in matters of marriage and divorce in regular courts. Shah Bano’s lawyer Danial Latifi had challenged the Constitutional validity of Muslim Women (Protection on Divorce Act), 1986. The apex court, though upholding the validity of the new law, said the liability can’t be restricted to the period of iddat. One of the key points of relevance in the verdict that set it apart from previous cases was the recognition of women’s claim for treatment with equality and dignity, particularly in cases of marriage.

In the case of Shayara Bano v. UOI & Ors. [(2017) 9 SCC 1], Shayara Bano, instituted a Public Interest Litigation (PIL) in Supreme Court in 2016. On 22nd August, 2017, Apex court, by a majority of 3:2 declared triple talaq illegal, unconstitutional and void.

In the case of Indian Young Lawyer's Association v. The State of Kerala & Ors, commonly known as Sabarimala Temple case [Writ petition (CIVIL) NO. 373 OF 2006], The Supreme Court struck down a rule that disallowed girls and women in the 10-50 age group from entering the Sabarimala temple in Kerala. Chief Justice Dipak Misra-headed Constitution bench in a 4-1 verdict said the temple rule violated their right to equality and right to worship.

Navtej Singh Johar & Ors. v. Union of India thr. Secretary Ministry of Law and Justice is a landmark decision of the Supreme Court of India in 2018 that decriminalised all consensual sex among adults in private, including homosexual sex. A five-judge constitution bench headed by Chief Justice Dipak Misra had reserved its verdict on July 17 after hearing various stakeholders for four days, including gay rights activists. Besides the CJI, the bench also comprised justices R F Nariman, A M Khanwilkar, D Y Chandrachud and Indu Malhotra. The Supreme Court thus scrapped Section 377 of the IPC, decriminalising the 158-year-old colonial law which criminalises consensual gay sex.

With these pathbreaking judgements, the session came to an end.

VISIT TO THE ALL INDIA INSTITUTE OF MEDICAL SCIENCES,

Bhopal

6thNovember, 2019

The participant judges today made a visit to the All India Institute of Medical Sciences, Bhopal, Madhya Pradesh. The judges were welcomed by Prof. Sarman Singh, Director, AIIMS, Dr. Jayanthi Yadav, Additional Professor, Department of Forensic Medicine, AIIMS, Dr. Sravan, J.S. and the entire forensic team of the Institute.

The participant judges visited and keenly observed the mortuary and the forensic science department of the institute that included autopsy room, sluice room, forensic radiology room, medico-legal examination room, post-mortem examination room and the cold area. The Doctors in-charge provided with all the basic information regarding the procedure followed in police cases including rape, murder, burn-cases, etc.

The participant judges were then requested to be in the auditorium of the institute wherein they were to be addressed. The Director, after giving a warm welcoming speech, told about the history and various peculiar features of the AIIMS, Bhopal. This was followed by a very insightful presentation by Dr. Jayanthi Yadav on “Autopsy-Protocol and Opinion”.

Details of the Presentation

The presentation covered all the basic medico legal aspects of an autopsy. The word autopsy is made up of two words: “auto” meaning “self” and “opsy” meaning “to see”, thus it means to see oneself. It was told that there are two kind of autopsies:

a. Clinical/ Academic Autopsy

In such an autopsy, the consent of the relatives is must and is very rarely done.

b. Medico-legal Autopsy

This is a very common kind of autopsy which is generally done by the governmental institutions on the instructions of legal authority or investigating agency.

The objective behind performing autopsies is three-fold:

- a. To determine the identity of the body.
- b. To know the cause of the death, and
- c. To know the manner of the death.

The pre-requisites/ rules for performing medico-legal autopsies are:

- a. Request from legal authority.
- b. Conducted only in government hospitals or centers/ colleges authorized by the government.

Further, Dr. Jayanthi gave information on various causes of death; types of evidences/ marks on the body; types of wounds/ injury; various ways of examination of the body; changes that occur after the death and preservations after autopsy.

The session then came to an end with a warming note of thanks by the staff member of AIIMS, Bhopal and also one of the participant judges of Bangladesh.
